First a horse railway franchise was given away, permitting the use of one side of the avenue. Then the more ambitious trolley corporations came and by act of the Legislature and ordinance of the municipalities, with the consent of some of the people, secured possession. These corporations are now practically the owners of Bloomfield Avenue. The traction companies control a strip through the middle twenty-five feet wide, and so much of it is almost as exclusively theirs as the roadbed of any steam railway. Unlike the latter, the trolley people have not had to purchase land, but have obtained a completely graded arbitration meeting held under the call of the Central Labor Union at Cooper Institute:

"Resolved, That we call the attention of preachers of all denominations to the fact that the workingman who was crucified eighteen hundred years ago for His denunciations of the unjustly rich, was a peace at any price man, and that a truly Christian nation would no more have standing armies and standing navies than it would have soup-houses and tramps."

Imple fact that a man has long been drawning a salary from the government in the civil of military service is coming to be accepted as 6 reason why such provision should be made for his family when he dies, even though the plet of poverty may be lacking. This is particularly true concerning officers of high degree, thus have been the greater the right is to a pension. The manifest injustice of such a discrimination is presented in the law which makes it nocessary for the widow of a private soldier to show that she has no means of support but her own labor before she can get the pittance of 18 or 12 per month, and the proposition pension by proving that her affinal income does not exceed 1800 is being opposed on the pretext that it is calculated to open the floodgate of improvident expenditure. When claims of this order are antagonized, it is time to quit voting pensions for service.

For endorsing that resolution in is time to quit voting pensions for service "The Outlook" Rev. Lyman Abbott has been put to the torture by some of the New York dailies, one of which piously says: "He has surrendered Cummings calling for an international himself to the devil."

Charles H. Hopper is in the third month of his New York run in the successful comedy of metropolitan life, "Chimmie Fadden" His change to the Standard Theatre has emphasized the fact that the success of a play is not governed by mere locality, for since his opening might on Broadway the audiences have been larger than at any time during his metropolitan engagement, the sign "Standing room only" now being a frequent and pleasant ornement in front of the Theatre.

The play goes with better spirit in it new home, the stirring incidents excite genuine enthusiasm, while the comedy scenes, and "Chimmie's" nuique and graphie Bowery language excite uproarious and unrestrained laughter. Mr. Hopper's performance of the hero has grown into an acmirable character impersonation. He has evidently devoted serious sindy to his characterization of the Bowery boy and it has now acquired a distinctive individuality. He is throughly natural in his demeasor, and has undoubtedly emphasized his porsonal success by his modesty and unobtrustveness. His songs find much favor and he never fails to obisin numerous encores.
